IBM Press. Paperback. Condition: New. 250 pages. Harvard Business Review recently called data science The Sexiest Job of the 21st Century. Its not just sexy: for millions of managers and students who need to solve business problems with big data, its indispensable. Unfortunately, theres been nothing sexy about learning data science -- until now. Getting Started with Data Science takes its approach from worldwide best-sellers like Freakonomics and the books of Malcolm Gladwell: it teaches through a powerful narrative packed with unforgettable stories. Murtaza Haider offers careful, jargon-free coverage of basic theory and technique, backed with plenty of clear examples and practice opportunities. Everythings software and platform independent, so you can learn what you need whether you work with R, Stata, SPSS, SAS, or another toolset. Best of all, Haider teaches a crucial skillset most academic data science books ignore: how to transform data into narratives, graphics, and tables that make it vivid and actionable. Every chapter is built around a real research challenge, so youll always know why youre doing what youre doing. Youll master data science by answering fascinating questions like: Are child safety seats safer for children than regular seat belts Which married parents are likelier to have affairs: fathers or mothers Is CEO compensation independent of a firms profitability Do attractive professors get better teaching evaluations What induces teenagers to start smoking What determines housing prices more: house size or location How do teenagers and older people differ in how they use social media Do risk-averse and risk-prone individuals differ in their purchases of big-ticket items For each problem, youll walk through identifying the right data and methods, creating summary statistics, describing and visualizing findings, and seeing how others have handled the challenge. In advanced chapters, youll also learn sophisticated statistical modeling techniques. Throughout, the focus...
