Excerpt: . . . for that the form of a table may more move and turn the simple from the old superstitious opinions of the popish mass, and to the right use of the Lords Supper, we exhort (he curates, churchwardens, and c. , to erect and set up the Lords board, after the form of an honest table, decently covered. During the reign of King Edward, the Lords table took the place of the Popish altars; but when Roman. Mary came to the throne Altars again took the place of Tables, and the Missal the place of the Prayer Book. When Queen Elizabeth became Head of the Church, Altars were again removed, and Tables set up once more in the Churches, upon the strong representations and efforts of the Reformers. (See Strypes Jlnnals, chap. 12.) Since that period, various High-Church divines have longed for the Altar again, as we may infer from their phraseology. The Prayer-Book, however, puts its veto upon this restoration. Yet they still adhere to the old Popish language; and persist in the name of Altar. This unauthorized innovation upon the language of the Church Service, is especially prevalent during these days of Popish Tractarianism. Inasmuch as the Prayer-Book never uses the term Altar, in the Communion Service, but always the term Table, why do the lovers of the Prayer-Book. never use Table, but always Altar f And why do they now begin to use the prothesis or little Altar--a phraseology dishonorable both...
