Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.From the Introduction. In approaching the subject of the social evil the distinction must be kept in mind between, first, the constant element which bears little relation to social and economic changes, to fluctuations of population or to localities or classes, and which is found in a clandestine relation in which some degree of regard is intermingled, quite as much as in professional prostitution; and, second, the business of prostitution, which is conducted for the profit of many shareholders, and which is stimulated as a trade in other lines of commerce and expansion. This is an age of great inventions, of business activity involving intense competitive struggle, of strenuous effort to obtain wealth quickly by not too scrupulous means, with the concomitant obscuring of cause and effect. It is an age of spending, of the prevalence of a high cost of living and a reckless sacrifice of human life to industry. Youth is gravitating toward the city, away from home, religious and personal ideals, breaking the moorings of the past before the newer social ideal is grasped. Freedom of thought, liberty of action, self expression, were never more dominant. It is inconceivable that these characteristics of the age should not influence the total moral life. The economic and political and industrial changes are resulting in a new body of law which expresses a growing social conscience with reference to wealth, power and official responsibility. It has been the purpose of the Research Committee to study social growth as expressed in the laws passed to regulate prostitution in its various phases, and to ascertain whether social legislation in this respect is keeping pace with industrial and political legislation and similarly expresses a developed consciousness...
